

Judicial self-government institutions

Published: 14.08.2024.

Judicial self-government institutions are independent institutions, and their work is regulated by the law "On Judicial Power" and the Judicial Disciplinary Liability Law.

Institutions are not subjected to the Judicial Council, however, the Judicial Council promotes their foundation and operation – convenes judges' conferences, at which self-government institutions are elected and their reports are heard, and approves their by-laws (except for the Disciplinary Committee).
